Complete Blood Count (CBC)

This test is used to evaluate your pet's overall health and detect a wide range of disorders

Chemistry Panel

An in-depth look at your cat's liver and kidney function, electrolyte balances, and blood proteins.

SDMA

A very sensitive indicator of kidney failure. Did you know that until the kidneys have failed, 75% of cats show no signs? This test detects declining kidney function at 50-60%!

Feline Virus Screening

Testing for: Feline Corona Virus; similar to the canine parvo virus. Feline Leukemia; one of the most common infectious diseases in cats which causes weight loss, inflammation of the gums, diarrhea, and more. Feline Immunodeficiency Virus; Attacks the immune system and leaves your cat vulnerable to many other infections.

Thyroid Test

The thyroid gland makes hormones that regulate the way the body uses energy. This will check for hyperthyroidism in your cat, which is a common disease most seen in cats that are middle-aged or older.
